HISTORICAL NOTE

One of Melbourne's leading architecture practices, the firm has designed many of Victoria's most prominent buildings. It originated with Joseph Reed, an architect who arrived from England in July 1853, and after executing some important commissions, went into partnership with Frederick Barnes in 1862. In 1883 Anketell M. Henderson and F.J. Smart, former employees of Reed and Barnes who had left to set up their own practice, rejoined the firm as partners. In 1890 Henderson left the partnership which was joined in April by W.B. Tappin and continued under the name of Reed, Smart and Tappin. Reed died in 1890 and Tappin in 1905. F.J. Smart, now the head of the firm, died two years later and N.G. Peebles, head draughtsman, became a partner with C.P. Smart (son of F.J.) under the style of Smart, Tappin and Peebles. E.A. Bates, who had been trained with the firm and entered into practice with R.G. Hyndman, rejoined Bates, Peebles and Smart to proceed with work on the new Reading Room of the Public Library. In 1922 Peebles died; and in 1936 Bates and Smart were joined by W.O. McCutcheon. The name of Bates, Smart and McCutcheon was retained through subsequent changes until 1995, when it became Bates Smart.
